In 1984, Yuri Bezmenov, a former Russian “KGB” agent, warned America against the 4 stages of “ideological subversion”:

- 1. Demoralize America
Undermine American principles and promote socialist ideology.
- 2. Destabilize America
Undermine American cultural, political, military, and religious institutions.
- 3. Manufacture Crisis in America
Use crisis as pretext for violent change in power, freedom, and economy.
- 4. A “New Normal” for America
A period of stability until another crisis is manufactured.

Jacobson v Massachusetts at 100 Years: Police Power and Civil Liberties in Tension

| Lawrence O. Gostin, JD

A century ago, the US Supreme Court in Jacobson v Massachusetts upheld the exercise of the police power to protect the public's health. Despite intervening scientific and legal advances, public health practitioners still struggle with Jacobson's basic tension between individual liberty and the common good.

In affirming Massachusetts' compulsory vaccination law, the Court established a floor of constitutional protections that consists of 4 standards: necessity, reasonable means, proportionality, and harm avoidance. Under Jacobson, the courts are to support public health matters insofar as these standards are respected.

If the Court today were to decide Jacobson once again, the analysis would likely differ—to account for developments in constitutional law—but the outcome would certainly reaffirm the basic power of government to safeguard the public's health. (Am J Public Health. 2005;95:576-581. doi:10.2105/AJPH.2004.055152)

JACOBSON V MASSACHUSETTS (1905)<sup>1</sup> is often regarded as the most important judicial decision in public health.<sup>2,3</sup> Why? Is it because of the Supreme Court's deference to public health decisionmaking? Is it because the Court enunciated a framework for the protection of individual liberties that persists today? Perhaps it is because Jacobson was decided during the same term as Lochner v New York<sup>4</sup>—the infamous Supreme Court case that struck down a law limiting the number of hours that bakers

Perhaps the most troubling aspect of the conspiracy theory initiative is how ingrained it became into US law.

Zero Hedge examined this in depth, discovering that judges are “trained to look at conspiracy allegations as just another legal claim to be disproven or proven based on the specific evidence.”

conspiracy.

- Law schools teach conspiracy law as a “fundamental legal concept”.

REJECTION OF DEFUSE PROJECT PROPOSAL

Proposal Title:	DEFUSE - Defusing the Threat of Bat-borne Coronaviruses (2018)
Proposal Identifier:	HR001118S0017-PREEMPT-FP-019
Amounts Requested by EcoHealth Alliance:
	Phase I	$8,411,546
	Phase II	$5,797,699
	Total:	$14,209,245

RESULT

The DEFUSE proposed project by EHA was rejected by DARPA, although "if funding became available", certain components of particular interest could have gone ahead, subject to a clear contractual Dual Use Research of Concern (DURC) risk mitigation plan that 'includes a responsible communications plan'.

REASONS FOR REJECTION

The Biological Technologies Office of DARPA reviewed the EcoHealth Alliance DEFUSE proposal and the Evaluation Reports and decided it was "selectable". In doing so, two out of three reviewers considered the aim of preempting "zoonotic spillover through reduction of viral shedding in the bat caves" as of interest to DARPA. These reviewers assessed the EHA and Collaborators team and concluded that:

- They have plenty of prior experience.
- They have access to Yunnan caves where bats are infected with SARSr viruses.
- They have carried out past surveillance work
- They have developed geo-based risk maps of zoonotic hotspots
- Their proposed experimental work is logical and can validate molecular and evolutionary models.
- Their proposed preemption approaches can rapidly be validated using bat and "batenized" mouse models.

However, the Biological Technologies Office did not recommend it be funded at that time because significant weaknesses were identified:

Executive Summary: DEFUSE

EcoHealth Alliance; Dr. Peter Daszak

CONCEPT

APPROACH

Host-Pathogen Prediction:

- Integrated field sampling, viral characterization, modeling: In-depth sampling of bat SARS-CoVs in high-risk site of active spillover, Yunnan, China. Spatial models using bat and viral data to estimate SARS-CoV jump potential across Asia. 'Spatial viral spillover risk' Mobile App, of background viral jump risk across Asia.
- Experimental assays to test QS, jump potential: Sequence QS, spike protein similarity to high-risk SARS-CoVs, model spike structure to assess ACE2 binding, then in vitro and ACE2 humanized mouse experiments. Use results to test machine-learning genotype-to-phenotype model predictions of viral spillover risk.
- Genotype-phenotype models: Models to estimate evolutionary/recombination rates, capacity to generate future QS capable of human infection, based on spike protein diversity, recombination frequency etc.
- Validation with previously-collected human sera: Use IPS assays that target specific SARS-CoV spikes to identify spillover of these strains in a high-risk population in Yunnan, China.

Intervention Development:

- (1) Broad-scale immune boosting: Inoculate bats with immune modulators to upregulate their naturally-inhibited innate immunity and suppress viral replication, transiently reducing viral shedding/spillover risk.
- (2) Targeted immune boosting: In concert with above, inoculate bats with novel chimeric polyvalent recombinant spike proteins to enhance their adaptive immune memory against specific, high-risk viruses.
- Viral dynamics: Develop stochastic simulation models to estimate the frequency, efficacy, and population coverage required for intervention approaches to effectively suppress the viral population.
- Field trial: Use team expertise in wildlife vaccine delivery (transdermal nanoparticles, raccoon poxvirus vector) to develop effective molecule delivery via automated aerosolization onto bats at roost entrance at our three test cave sites in a cave complex in Yunnan, China, where SARS-CoVs have infected people.

IMPACT

- Security concerns across Asia make the region a potential deployment site for US warfighters. Troops face increased disease risk from SARS-CoVs, which are shed via urine and feces as bats forage at night.
- Our work in Yunnan, China shows that: 1) bat SARS-CoVs exist that can infect human cells, produce SARS-like illness in humanized mice, and are not affected by monoclonal or vaccine treatment; and 2) bat SARS-CoV host-jump into local human populations is frequent. These viruses are therefore a clear and present danger to US defense forces in the region and global health security.
- Our goal is to analyze, predict, then "DEFUSE" the spillover potential of novel bat-origin high-risk SARS-CoVs in Southeast Asia and across these viruses distribution. This will safeguard the US warfighter, reduce risk for local communities and their livestock, improving food and global health security.
- Our strategy is based on immune parameters that are found across all bat taxonomic groups. If successful, the DEFUSE approach can be adapted to MERS-CoV in the Middle East, other SARS-CoVs in Africa, and other high-impact bat-origin viruses (e.g. Hendra, Nipah, Ebola, Marburg viruses).

	Phase I	Phase II	Total
Proposed	$8,411,546	$5,797,699	$14,209,245

☒ Human Use/ ☒ Animal Use

CONTEXT

- No technology exists to reduce exposure to novel bat CoVs. No effective therapeutics or countermeasures for SARS-CoV, related CoVs, or other bat viruses (Ebola, Marburg, Nipah, Hendra etc).
- Our team has conducted pioneering research modeling disease emergence, understanding CoV virology, bat immunity, and wildlife vaccine delivery. Previous work provides proof-of-concept for: 1) predictive 'hotspot' modeling; 2) upregulating bat immune response through the STING IFN pathway, 3) recombinant chimeric spike-proteins from SARS-CoVs; 4) molecule delivery to wildlife incl. bats.
- DEFUSE approach is based on immunological pattern found across bat families, therefore will be broadly effective, scalable, economical and achievable in the allotted time frame. It poses little environmental risk, and presents no threat to the warfighter, or non-target populations.
- Immune modulation is more likely to be effective than CRISPR-Cas9 gene drives because bats are relatively long-lived, highly mobile, and have long inter-generational periods (2-5 years) with low progeny (1-2 pups). Furthermore, gene drive technology could have negative ecological consequences and its effectiveness will be hard to evaluate within the defined Period of Performance.
